

Collaborative Research and Participation Request

Date of Request:

Chronic Pain Australia is dedicated to reducing the unnecessary suffering and isolation caused by chronic pain in the Australian community. To that end, we aim to promote and facilitate research that will contribute to the evidence base and improve our knowledge and understanding of chronic pain prevention and management, as well as the social barriers and other challenges related to living with chronic pain.

In an effort to ensure that the research we facilitate or participate in is ethical and provides minimal risk for people impacted or experiencing chronic pain. Chronic Pain Australia promotes research studies that have ethics approval from a university or other recognised authority’s Human Research Ethics Committee (HREC).

If you would like to partner with Chronic Pain Australia on a clinical research project or grant application, please complete the information below:
